“Structural Simplification - Fewer Rocks to Hide Under”

Organizations trend towards increasingly complexity over time. Complexity manifests in multiple forms including through legal entity structures, technology / information platforms, asset & liability structures, employee & external service providers relationships, among other areas. As the layers and complexity increase, management and control functions can become more distanced from the underlying activities & transaction level detail. This creates risk to the organization, but also adds unnecessarily to the cost base creating opportunities to save. While great internal benefits through scaling back by simplifying structures increasing these pressures are also coming from external stakeholders. ... more at acfi.ca
